

↻ Featured Author Biography ↻

Clemson Literary Festival

& 40th Anniversary of The South Carolina Review

Michelle Martin

Michelle Martin is a professor in the English department at Clemson University as well as a writer on various topics, her foremost being children's literature and African American studies. So far, she has written one book, Brown Gold: Milestones of African American Children's Books and has co-edited Sexual Pedagogies: Sex Education in Britain, Australia, and America, 1879-2000. Her work has also appeared in numerous literary journals and scholarly works, including The Five Owls, The Lion and the Unicorn, and Embracing, Evaluating and Examining African American Children's and Young Adult Literature. Martin has also had the distinction of being named a recipient of Yale University's Betsy Beinecke Shirley Fellowship. She was also the recipient of Clemson's Outstanding Woman Award for faculty.

Writer/Professor/Festival Organizer

